

Wood to Energy II: Promoting BioEnergy in Your Neck of the Woods

Participants in this single day workshop will learn about biomass and biofuel resources within North Carolina, the economic benefits and job creation from bioenergy projects, bioenergy industry trends, public and private partnerships, policy and market development, port authority updates and opportunities, and available resources and tools to help recruit sustainable bioenergy industries to North Carolina. Participants from the first workshop included economic developers, county commissioners, military growth task force members, biomass industry entrepreneurs and experts, university professors, and representatives from the North Carolina Biofuels Center and Division of Environmental and Natural Resources.

"If you are in need of overnight accommodations to attend this meeting, a special group rate has been established at the DoubleTree Brownstone Hotel for the night of March 5th. The hotel is located close to NC State University and just underwent a beautiful renovation. Please contact the hotel directly at 919-828-0811. Be sure to ask for the Wood to Energy meeting to get the special rate. The deadline for reserving a room at the DoubleTree is February 20, 2012."
